Feminist Periodicals

A Current Listing of Contents

Volume 29, Number 1 (Winter 2009)

Periodical literature is the cutting edge of women's scholarship, feminist theory, and much of women's culture. Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents is published by the Office of the University of Wisconsin System Women's Studies Librarian on a quarterly basis with the intent of increasing public awareness of feminist periodicals. It is our hope that Feminist Periodicals will serve several purposes: to keep the reader abreast of current topics in feminist literature; to increase readers' familiarity with a wide spectrum of feminist periodicals; and to provide the requisite bibliographic information should a reader wish to subscribe to a journal or to obtain a particular article at her library or through interlibrary loan. (Users will need to be aware of the limitations of copyright law with regard to photocopying of copyrighted materials.)

Table of contents pages from current issues of major feminist journals are reproduced in each issue of Feminist Periodicals, followed by a comprehensive annotated listing of all journals we have selected. As publication schedules vary enormously, not every periodical will have table of contents pages reproduced in each issue of FP. The annotated listing provides the following information on each journal:

1. Year of first publication.
2. Frequency of publication.
3. Subscription prices (print only; for online prices, consult publisher).
4. Subscription address.
5. Current editor.
6. Editorial address (if different from subscription address).
7. International Standard Serials Number (ISSN).
8. OCLC, Inc. Control Number.
9. Selected publications in which the journal is indexed.
10. Selected fulltext products in which publication appears or vendor intermediaries who make the full text available.
11. Subject focus/statement of purpose of the journal.

Please note that in the actual text, only the numbers 1 to 11 are used to identify the different categories of information.

Our goal in Feminist Periodicals is to represent English-language periodicals from around the world that focus on gender, women's studies, or women's issues. Generally, we do not include mainstream newsstand magazines. We are also unable to include periodicals that lack a complete table of contents. We encourage feminist serials to build a full table of contents into their regular format to facilitate possible inclusion in FP and indexing elsewhere.

University of Wisconsin System users: To locate these periodicals within the UW System, do a UW System/Universal Borrowing search from your campus catalog (labeled variously "Other Libraries," "More Libraries," "Other Catalogs," "Other UW Catalogs," etc.) If information on actual holdings (volumes and issues) is not in the records retrieved, contact the Reference Department at the library of interest.

Suggestions for improvements of Feminist Periodicals are gratefully received. We would particularly appreciate assistance from readers in the UW System with our efforts to keep the holding information complete and up to date. Please let us know about new subscriptions, subscriptions we have overlooked, cancellations, or other pertinent information.

Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents (ISSN 1941-725X) is published online, quarterly, by Phyllis Holman Weisbard, UW System Women's Studies Librarian, 430 Memorial Library, 728 State Street, Madison, WI 53706. Phone (608) 263-5754. Email: wiswsl@library.wisc.edu. Website: <http://womenst.library.wisc.edu>
Compiler: Heather Shimon. Graphics: Daniel Joe.

Feminist Periodicals is available free of charge at <http://womenst.library.wisc.edu/publications/feminist-periodicals.html>. A subscription to the publications of the Office of the UW-System Women's Studies Librarian includes our print publications Feminist Collections: A Quarterly of Women's Studies Resources and New Books on Women, Gender, & Feminism along with email notification of each new issue of Feminist Periodicals. Subscription rates: Wisconsin subscriptions: $10.00 (individuals affiliated with the UW System), $20.00 (organizations affiliated with the UW System), $20.00 (individuals or non-profit women's programs), $30.00 (institutions). Out-of-state subscriptions: $35.00 (individuals & women's programs in the U.S.), $65.00 (institutions in the U.S.), $50.00 (individuals & women's programs in Canada/Mexico), $80.00 (institutions in Canada/Mexico), $55.00 (individuals & women's programs elsewhere outside the U.S.), $85.00 (institutions elsewhere outside the U.S.). Wisconsin subscriber amounts include state tax (except UW organizations amount). Feminist Periodicals was originally a print publication (ISSN 0742-7433) from v.1, n.1, 1981 through v.27, n.4, Fall 2007. Printed back issues of these issues are available for $10 each. All prices include postage. Publications of the Office of the UW-System Women's Studies Librarian are available free of charge to UW Women's Studies Offices, UW Campus Women's Centers, and UW Libraries.

Back issues of Feminist Periodicals are archived online at <http://digital.library.wisc.edu/1793/259>.

"Cassie Fox balances a head in the clouds with a solid and earthy approach to photography. She loves working in both color and black and white, letting the mood of each image determine the end result. As a homebirthing mother herself, she feels privileged to document other women's birth days and never leaves with anything less than a full heart and a profound appreciation. As Cassie says, 'I write and I shoot. My words are the composer and my photos the choir. Sometimes they are quiet and sometimes they are loud, but they are always singing something.' President Obama = a new mold for leadership and a strong voice for women

BY DONNA BRAZILE

NIKK

magasin 1.2009

12 “The share of women leaders in Denmark is extremely low compared to other EU member states. Only Malta and Cyprus do worse than Denmark.”

— ANETTE BORCHORST, RESEARCHER

40 “In the Nordic countries, prostitutes are victims. Instead of supporting prostitutes, we have made them a problem which undermines the order of our society.”

— JAANA KAUPPINEN, DIRECTOR

8 Somebody is making you stupid!

“Hearing that you’re not stupid has a liberating effect,” says Berit Ås, known for her theory on master suppression techniques. At 80, she continues to attract wide interest.

12 Gender equality only where visible

“The lack of women leaders is not a luxury problem,” says Professor Anita Göransson.

16 The road towards 40%

“I hope the quota legislation will pave the way for an alternative form of thinking within business” says former party leader Valgerd Svarstad Haugland.

20 Margot Wallström on leadership and politics

“As long as politics is male dominated, there will be a need for female networks,” says Margot Wallström, Vice-President of the European Commission.

22 European Parliament shows little interest

“The Gender Equality Committee of the European Parliament runs the risk of being abolished,” says Committee Vice Chair Eva-Britt Svensson.

24 Will they go the same way?

In just a few years, the body of legislation on prostitution in the Nordic countries has undergone an epoch-making development and become more uniform.

28 Closeness and control for sale

The website sexhandel.no (sextrade) is an initiative that enables customers themselves to describe their own thoughts about buying sex.

31 Nordic countries vs. Europe

The Nordic countries all want to limit prostitution, while several other European countries regard prostitution as a legitimate occupation.

34 What do numbers tell us?

How much prostitution is there in the Nordic countries?

36 Mobilising public opinion

The population in most of the Nordic countries has, during the last few years, taken an increasingly critical attitude towards prostitution.

38 Men on the periphery

Foreign prostitutes changes the focus of social measures.

40 Heated debate

A heated debate arose at a prostitution conference arranged by NIKK.

42 Demands for better protection

The fight against human trafficking is a very hot theme in the Nordic social debate.

Comparing the Effects of Treatment on Female Juvenile Gang and Non-Gang Members

Pamela J. Schram
Larry K. Gaines

Most research indicates that males comprise the greatest proportion of gang members. Since the 1990s, however, there has been an increasing interest in female gangs and gang members. The current study builds on this research interest by examining differences between female gang members and non-gang members who participated in a juvenile probation program designed to identify and intervene with youth considered to be high risk for subsequent criminal and delinquent activity. The results of a logistic regression analysis revealed that two factors significantly influenced a female offender's likelihood of being rearrested: she did not complete the program, and she did not live with her natural parent(s). We conclude that the significant results do support findings from previous research in this area; we also discuss possible explanations as to why other factors were not significantly related to rearrests.

Stirred, Shaken, or Blended? Gender Differences in Processing and Treatment of Juvenile Offenders

Nicole T. Flynn
Roma S. Hanks
Lindsey Gurley

17

Research documents the variation in levels of offending and the official response to boys' and girls' misbehavior (see Chesney-Lind & Sheldon 2004 for a nice summary of this work). Our research questions develop from this literature. We first expect differences in girls and boys at intake to a residential program for low- to-medium risk offenders, and then we also expect differences in official responses to girls and boys during their aftercare experience. Our findings confirm the literature—girls and boys differ in seriousness of committing offenses. Additionally, girls and boys are treated differently during their time in juvenile justice programming. For example, girls are monitored more closely than boys and receive less serious penalties for similar levels of rule violations. We find no difference between boys and girls in their odds of receiving a serious sanction. While traditional theoretical attempts to explain girls' misbehavior are often described with the expression "add women and stir," our findings suggest that both behavior of and official response to boys' and girls' activities show that girls are not simply stirred into the male mix but are responded to differently than boys and in ways that illustrate conventional gender socialization.

Rape Victim Advocates' Knowledge and Insight on Rape Laws

Shana L. Maier

37

Although previous literature details the successes and failures of reforms of rape laws designed to better support and protect victims, there is a lack of research on rape victim advocates' knowledge of and views about rape laws. It is essential that we understand advocates' level of legal knowledge because they may be the first or only source of legal information for victims. Based on analysis of interviews with 58 rape victim advocates serving six rape crisis centers in four East coast states, this article explores advocates' knowledge about rape laws, possible reasons for limited knowledge, and perceptions about various laws that aim to protect rape victims. This research suggests that although advocates have a somewhat limited grasp of laws intended to aid rape victims, they have an overall negative view of the legal system.

Sex Discrimination Lawsuits in Law Enforcement: A Case Study of Thirteen Female Officers Who Sued Their Agencies

Kimberly A. Lonsway
Angela M. Alipio

63

This case study offers a detailed description of the experiences of 13 women who sued their law enforcement agencies for sexual harassment or another form of sex discrimination, using both quantitative and qualitative methods. These women experienced a wide range of negative workplace behaviors with deleterious impact on their psychological, physical, and professional well-being. Outcomes were worse for those experiencing more serious and/or frequent types of mistreatment. When the women reported the behaviors, they experienced myriad forms of retaliation. Only 5 of the 13 women stated that changes were implemented in their agencies as a result of their lawsuit. As a result, they exhibited considerable ambivalence when offering advice to women who are currently considering such a lawsuit. Nonetheless, most of the women (8 of 13) stated that they were personally glad that they had done so.

ESSAYS

Paysages de corps et d'esprit : moulage d'une identité féminine dans l'Heptaméron de Marguerite de Navarre (1559)

Corinne Wilson 12

La symbolique spatiale derrière l'écriture de Marguerite de Navarre dans l'Heptaméron représente plus qu'un simple témoignage de sa mobilité à l'intérieur du pays. L'Heptaméron fournit en effet des informations précieuses sur la place et l'espace des femmes de la Renaissance française. Les nouvelles montrent l'espace non seulement selon une perspective féminine, mais également les lieux dits féminins selon cette même perspective. Nous analyserons en premier le paysage extérieur, pour en montrer le caractère limitatif et restrictif, en particulier pour les femmes. Ensuite, nous identifierons le paysage intérieur, pour découvrir une nouvelle dynamique de l'espace, une dynamique d'ouverture et de fermeture. Finalement, nous verrons combien cette redéfinition féminine de l'espace conduit à un idéal spatial sans frontière, avec un paysage et une identité spirituels définis par la femme.

Post-War Jewish Women's Writing in French

Lucille Cairns 24

As anglophone-based French studies increasingly open up to the purviews and agendas of cultural studies, including those of gender and ethnicity, this essay seeks to remedy a significant gap in that evolution. Beginning with broad synopsis and then moving into closer analysis of individual texts, it plots certain salient coordinates within French-language Jewish women's writing of the post-war period. Particular attention is paid to four broadly representative writers: two authors who, on the whole, appear to exemplify the more traditional concerns of the second generation (Elisabeth Gilles and Myriam Anissimov), and two who, in contrast, exemplify a post-1968 episteme which is informed by, though not reduced to, gendered structures of experience (Eliette Abécassis and Karine Tuil).

Enfance de Nathalie Sarraute. La déchirure salutaire

Lina Avendaño Anguita 39

L'analyse de la temporalité verbale en termes de focalisation permet une approche discursive de Enfance de Nathalie Sarraute. L'alternance de l'imparfait et du présent de l'indicatif contribue ainsi à rendre un processus de remémoration qui ne cherche pas à retrouver le moment particulier d'une vie, celle de Nathalie Sarraute, mais plutôt à atteindre une origine encore intacte. S'exposant à une déchirure salutaire, le sujet de conscience cherche en effet à percer les souvenirs de façades, à dépasser les platitudes de l'univers familier pour parcourir des mouvements intérieurs vagues, inexplorés.

Albert Cohen, Annie Ernaux et le portrait problématique de la mère

Véronique Maisier 51

Une lecture comparative d'Une Femme d'Annie Ernaux et du Livre de ma mère d'Albert Cohen souligne la façon dont ces auteurs, malgré des styles opposés, des portraits maternels antithétiques et une façon différente de relater l'impact du décès maternel, se rapprochent à la fois dans leur besoin d'assumer une même angoisse et dans l'exemplarité qu'ils assignent à leur récit. Une analyse de l'écriture du deuil de ces auteurs montre comment le témoignage littéraire des enfants/auteurs tente une réparation posthume vis-à-vis de la mère dans une recherche d'absolution par l'intermédiaire d'un mea culpa publié. En effet, si l'écriture est perçue comme un élément primordial du « travail du deuil », il importe de se demander ce que réciproquement le deuil apporte à l'écriture et d'examiner les enjeux de la publication de récits intimes.

Le féminisme de Virginie Despentes à l'étude dans le roman Baise-moi

Hélène Sicard-Cowan 64

Drawing on the ideas developed by Judith Butler in her book Bodies That Matter, this article interprets Virginie Despentes' first novel Baise-moi as a literary reflection on the violent implications of the constitution and preservation of a coherent female subjectivity. The first part of the article examines the highly complex relationship that develops between Despentes' heroines over the course of the novel, showing that the two female protagonists cannot be reduced to a single subjectivity. Building on this analysis, the second part then highlights two principles of Despentes' feminism: her refusal of analogical thinking and her affirmation of contradictory identities.

The Perversity of Whiteness: Paule Constant's White Spirit as a Gendered Rewriting of Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness

Natalie Edwards 73

This article examines the intertextual references between Paule Constant's White Spirit and Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness. I argue that Constant's novel rewrites the European male colonialist's journey from a gendered perspective. The techniques used to achieve this include infusing Conrad's tale with heavily symbolic female characters, with male characters that belie the colonialists' sexual perversion, with animals that take on human characteristics, and with a colonial structure that emphasizes the sexually sordid aspect of empire. The article shows that Constant writes empire as an inherently sexual structure that impacts negatively upon all the characters' psyches, but most significantly upon women; while men suffer psychologically from the sexually perverse colonial society, the quest for whiteness to which the novel's title refers transforms, denigrates and denaturalizes both European and African women.

Murder or Accident? Condé's Postcolonial Detective Novels

Typhaine Leservot 85

Postcolonial detective fiction has been the object of a growing body of criticism since Ed Christian's 2001 publication on the topic. According to Christian, "the interrogation of suspects" typical of crime fiction becomes, in postcolonial contexts, an "interrogation of society" that can only be solved by a postcolonial detective inhabiting both "western colonial law and local culture" (2). Although diverse, and certainly adding new content to the detective fiction genre, postcolonial crime fiction ultimately leaves the genre's structural paradigm intact by preserving the existence of a murder, a detective, and a murderer.

Three novels by Maryse Condé upset this paradigm and offer a different message about murders in various postcolonial contexts. Traversée de la mangrove (1989), La Belle Créole (2001), and La Femme cannibale (2003) all open with a dead body and look at first like a standard "whodunit." But unlike the stories studied by critics of the genre, Condé's postcolonial detective fiction doesn't solve the crime traditionally. In fact, Condé's detective fiction revamps the genre of the detective story by either getting rid of the detective, or getting rid of the murder, or both. Most importantly perhaps, Condé's subversion of detective fiction undermines postcolonial theory by refusing to see these apparent crimes as postcolonial crimes, thus freeing her postcolonial subjects from postcolonial theoretical determinism.

Assia Djebar's La Femme sans sépulture: Anxiety and Testimonial Writing

Anna Rocca 100

In La Femme sans sépulture, the act of writing witnesses and narrates the tragedy of Zoulikha, the forgotten heroine of the Algerian independence war. In this novel, Djebar's testimonial writing becomes more effective thanks to the presence of a new component in the narration, which is a distinct form of individual and social anxiety. Anxiety engages the reader more actively and eventually induces him/her to witness persecution and historical injustice, to recognize complicity in the human ordeal of suffering, and perhaps, ultimately, his/her historical responsibility. By eliciting deep and comprehensive emotions, the author also aims to create a new liturgy, whereby narrators and readers join to recognize and transform grief and suffering into a more complex understanding of life.

GRADUATE ESSAY

Responding to the Shadows: Reimagining Subjectivity in Tadjó's L'Ombre d'Imana

Jenelle Griffin.....113

Véronique Tadjó wrote L'Ombre d'Imana (2000) in response to the 1994 genocide in Rwanda, for which social narratives that divide an us from a them were partly responsible. Tadjó's text appears to mirror the social fragmentation: the narration is divided between an autobiographical narrator, witnesses' testimonials, and a third-person omniscient narrator recounting fable-like stories. The combined presence of these three narrative voices seems to undermine the conventional authority of each. However, read through the lens of Kelly Oliver's model of subjectivity based on witnessing, the text illustrates a new method of listening to others without reducing their narratives to fit in pre-existing categories. On one level, the narrator demonstrates the practice of hearing witness testimony beyond recognition; on another level, the text calls on the reader to repeat the practice in order to hear the author's account of her experience, communicated by all three narrative voices.

ENTRETIEN

Vie de fille, vie de femme : Entretien avec Marie Etienne

Dawn M. Cornelio.....127

Marie Etienne, poète, essayiste, critique et romancière, a publié plus d'une vingtaine d'ouvrages depuis 1977. Dans cet entretien, elle discute, honnêtement et avec candeur, du rôle de la femme dans le monde et dans la littérature. Elle réfléchit aux influences du monde et de la littérature sur la fille et la femme, et imagine comment la femme peut échapper aux rôles qui lui sont attribués.

Reinterpreting the Griselda Legend: Sainctonge Versus Perrault
Perry Gethner	48

The Griselda story celebrates the extreme humility, modesty and obedience displayed by a model wife to her unreasonable and dictatorial husband, who, after imposing a series of psychological torments and humiliations, takes her back and reunites her with their children. Sainctonge, one of the rare female writers to adapt the story, rejected all the misogynist elements in Perrault's version. Whereas Perrault emphasizes the religious allegory and presents the husband in a favorable light, she presents a more egalitarian view of marriage and a less masochistic view of religion. Her various additions and changes to plot and characterization show her concern for the dignity and self-esteem of women. The husband's instinctive cruelty, the wife's resigned submissiveness and the improbable happy ending suggest that Sainctonge intended her play to serve as a critique of current marriage norms.

Widows and Riccoboni's Lettres d'Adélaïde de Dammartin
Marijn S. Kaplan	58

In eighteenth-century France, widows appeared to possess more social and economic freedom than both their married and never-married counterparts due to the independence they had acquired from husbands, fathers, and brothers. Marie Jeanne Riccoboni (1713-1792) exemplified the widow's privileged position in her oeuvre well before experiencing it herself; her 1767 epistolary novel Lettres d'Adélaïde de Dammartin features no less than three widows. In retracing their various paths to widowhood, Riccoboni denounces marriage and its impact on women. Paradoxically though, all the widows have remarried when the novel ends. Suzan van Dijk has tracked this paradox to an earlier version of the novel Riccoboni wrote for a periodical and ascribes the surprise ending to the altered genre requirements. In conjunction with van Dijk's work, I analyze the role widows play in this novel. I argue that, although the feminist message is indeed diluted from the periodical to the novel, the author nevertheless uses the widows in Lettres d'Adélaïde de Dammartin as a vehicle for her feminism and additionally, to formulate a stronger feminist message for her subsequent novel, Lettres d'Élisabeth Sophie de Vallière (1772).

Des bienfaits et des tourments de l'économie domestique
Bénédicte Monicat	66

Composante incontournable de l'éducation des filles au XIX^e siècle, l'économie domestique constitue l'un des rares domaines d'expertise — hiérarchie des savoirs et répartition des tâches obligent — que l'on ne conteste pas aux femmes et qui leur soit exclusivement réservé. Les nombreux ouvrages d'instruction consacrés par les femmes à la « science du ménage » n'ont pas jusqu'à présent reçu l'attention dont ont pu bénéficier d'autres écrits consacrés à l'enfance en cet âge d'or de la littérature de jeunesse. Ils méritent cependant d'être examinés dans leurs factures et dans leurs propos. Ces textes permettent en effet d'éclairer, de nuancer et peut-être de transformer nos reconstructions de l'histoire intellectuelle et littéraire des femmes. La présente analyse insiste sur les dimensions esthétiques de ces ouvrages. Elle souligne également les paradoxes qui définissent des écrits où science et expérience, savoir et savoir-faire entretiennent des relations à la fois malaisées et harmonieuses, et peut-être émancipatrices.

III. MEMORY, EXILE AND THE SUBJECT

Secret Rooms and Borrowed Pianos: Gaby Casadesus, Lucie Delécluse, and Franco-American Musical Preservation During the Second World War
Kendra Preston Leonard	76

In September 1939, as American musicians studying and performing at the Conservatoire Américain de Fontainebleau fled for safer grounds, France declared war on Germany. Intent on preserving the Franco-American musical exchange fostered by the Conservatoire, pianist Gaby Casadesus made arrangements for the school to operate in the United States, providing a European atmosphere for students and offering colleagues a safe haven in which to teach and perform for the duration of the hostilities. In Fontainebleau, Conservatoire administrator Lucie Delécluse conspired with French guards at the Palais de Fontainebleau, home to the Conservatoire, hiding music, autograph scores, manuscripts, and artwork behind a false wall. This article examines the relationship between French and American musicians as war-time allies and artistic partners in a vast interchange of approaches and aesthetics, and both women's stories create a rarely seen side of cultural life and advocacy during the war.

Se retourner dans la langue: Réécriture de mythes et contes occidentaux dans l'œuvre de Linda Lê
Anne Magnan-Park	85

Linda Lê est une écrivaine francophone née au Vietnam en 1963, exilée en France à l'âge de quatorze ans. Elle inscrit dans la fibre des mythes et contes occidentaux — tous deux fondateurs d'une culture — l'expérience post-coloniale et déconstructrice de l'exilé. C'est ainsi que le conte de Hansel et Gretel devient celui d'un enfant errant loin de sa patrie (« Les pieds nus », 1995). Le mythe altéré d'Orphée qui en découle ne dépeint plus le poète se retournant vers sa bien-aimée, Eurydice, mais l'écrivaine déplacée qui, au son d'une lyre d'emprunt, se retourne dans sa langue d'écriture.

Reconfiguring the Self: A Study of Latifa Ben Mansour's L'Année de l'éclipse Through Political, Psychological, and Stylistic Lenses
Jane E. Evans	95

Latifa Ben Mansour's third novel, L'Année de l'éclipse (Calmann-Lévy 2001), has prompted a study of the political, psychological, and stylistic elements that characterize protagonist Hayba's journey from grief to joy between November 1998 and July 1999. A new widow bereft of both her daughter and husband, Hayba must confront her most painful memories of loss in order to reconfigure her life in Paris, France, as a single, future parent. Hayba is an Algerian woman who has fled her homeland in order to escape further violence directed by Muslim religious extremists at westernized, well-educated citizens. As such, she typifies the plight of thousands of intellectual Algériennes of the past two decades. The novel itself, based on historical events from 1998 to 1999, belongs to the littérature de témoignage of the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries.

Can the Subjected Speak?—Giving a Voice to the Voiceless in Moi, l'interdite by Ananda Devi and Une Femme de rien by Maryline Desbiolles

Jean Anderson 108
In her 1987 novel Une Femme de rien, Maryline Desbiolles creates a central female character whose presence in the narrative seems at first sight to be that of a socially marginalized and voiceless victim, incapable of speaking in the Spivakian sense. The nameless heroine and first-person narrator of Ananda Devi's Moi l'interdite (2000) is also excluded and deprived of human contact. Both women therefore clearly present characteristics of passivity and objectification. This study argues, however, that a deeper reading of both books, taking into account the authors' narrative strategies and in relation to more subtle concepts of agency such as those proposed by Armstrong, based in part on the work of Deleuze and Guattari, reveals a very different picture. Exclusion and apparent passivity, if self-contained and in literary form, can indeed be read as integrity and autonomy.

IV. RECONFIGURING GENDER AND GENRE:
PHILOSOPHY, FICTION AND FILM

Genre Trouble in Nicole Brossard's Un livre

Amy L. Hubbell 116
Nicole Brossard, a Francophone Québécoise feminist author, published one of her first and most obscure novels, un livre, in 1970. This "book" as it is playfully titled is just less than one hundred pages long (there are two pages ninety-nine), and it resembles poetry more than the "roman" it claims to be on its cover. With wide margins, a lack of punctuation, unorthodox capitalization, lines with sometimes just one or two words, and the inclusion of charts, lists, self-citation and other non-standard techniques, Brossard's text challenges both genre and her readers' interpretive skills while drawing in the hors-texte that she calls "précieux" (7). This essay demonstrates that by calling attention to the physical space of the book, Brossard invites her readers into the spaces, ambiguities and in-betweens of genre, thereby writing a new feminine fiction through their reading.

Ceci n'est pas Colette: Writing, Performance and Identity in Colette's Mes Apprentissages

Tama Lea Engelking 124
Colette's 1936 memoir, Mes Apprentissages, chronicles the lessons in performance she learned from her husband Willy, and how those lessons shaped her identity as a writer. Colette situates her writing debut in the theatrical context of the Belle Époque, and describes how she came to writing wearing the mask of Claudine, the character she created and impersonated in public. By presenting the writing subject as a pose, and writing as a spectacle associated with masks, artifice, and role playing, Mes Apprentissages undermines autobiographical approaches to reading Colette's work.

A Dialogics and Ethics of Love: Luce Irigaray's The Way of Love

Katherine Stephenson 135
There is a long-standing custom in the West that talk of love belongs to the realm of the personal, of intimate discourse, or to representations of this realm. Since the binary categories of gender dictate that the character traits of the sexes are exclusive and oppositional, the early association of males with reason by Greek philosophers led to the concomitant alignment of women with emotion, that which clouds reason and renders judgment unstable and unreliable. As a discourse, love is therefore historically associated with women, and its invocation serves to reinforce their assignment to the category of lesser Other, occupied with the personal and the concrete rather than with the public and the abstract. In the last decade or so, a handful of established feminist theorists have undertaken a recoding of this trivialization of women and love. After elaborating their own revisionist systems of thought that reposition Woman in philosophical discourse, trailblazers Carol Gilligan, Luce Irigaray, Teresa de Lauretis, and Kaja Silverman have taken up a discourse of love, each for her own reasons and in a particular relation to her work. In this essay, I will examine how the work of French feminist philosopher Luce Irigaray has evolved into an exploration of love and what that means for the philosophy of sexual difference she has been articulating for the last thirty years.

Filming Adolescence: Anne-Sophie Birot's Les Filles ne savent pas nager

Michelle Scatton-Tessier 144
At no other time have so many young women directors been producing feature films highlighting the trepidations of being a mother, daughter and (girl)friend, so much so that, since the mid-1990s, the French film industry has been speaking of a feminization of the profession. Offering a backdrop of films by contemporary French women directors, this article studies the history of a relatively undefined genre within French cinema: the coming-of-age film in the feminine. Following a brief history of this possible genre, the article investigates the extent to which Annie-Sophie Birot's first feature film, Les Filles ne savent pas nager (2000) represents both past films d'adolescence and films contemporaneous to her project.

V. CRUEL LAUGHTER AND WOMEN'S HUMOUR

From "Le Torrent" to La Cage: Laughter in Anne Hébert's Work

Annabelle M. Rea 154
François Perrault's declaration in the 1945 novella "Le Torrent," "je ne savais ni jouer ni rire," serves as the starting point for an exploration of laughter in Anne Hébert's writing. A brief summary of interdisciplinary research on laughter and play introduces the analysis of "Le Torrent" and the 1990 scenario, La Cage. Female laughter in the novella, sometimes entirely absent, at other times seemingly omnipresent, contrasts with the sadistic laughter of François Perrault. Such "toxic" male laughter carries over to Elzéar Corriveau and John Crebessa of La Cage, while the woman protagonist in the play, Ludvine Corriveau, is at first able to laugh and play only within the freedom of dream. She later meets a painter, Hyacinthe, named for the mythological character associated with sport and play, and, with his help, triumphs over the injustice of her historical fate. In the context of Quebec's early lack of literary humor, Anne Hébert has expressed her plea for the universal right to the freedom of a playful, laughing childhood and to similarly intoxicating joys that, as true gifts, revisit the adult.

Rira bien qui rira pour la primultième fois: Les Catilinaires d'Amélie Nothomb

Frédérique Chevillot 165
Amélie Nothomb est-elle une auteure comique ? Les textes de la « Belge à succès » porteraient-ils à rire ? « Rira bien qui rira la primultième fois » tente de répondre à ces questions à travers la lecture des Catilinaires, sixième roman de l'auteure (1995). En effet, si à première lecture, le texte nothombien porte véritablement à rire – par gêne ou par un étrange sentiment de malaise – ce sera bien pour la dernière fois. À la deuxième lecture, le rire sera remplacé par une sorte de grimace existentielle. Le rire spontané ne peut avoir lieu qu'une seule et première fois qui sera, en somme, la dernière-première fois... la primultième.

11. "Berkeley Journal of Gender, Law & Justice, a continuation of the Berkeley Women's Law Journal, is guided by an editorial policy which distinguishes us from other law reviews and feminist journals. Our mandate is to publish research, analysis, narrative, theory, and commentary that address the lives and struggles of underrepresented women. We believe that excellence in feminist legal scholarship requires critical examination of the intersection of gender with one or more other axes of subordination, including, but not limited to, race, class, sexual orientation, and disability. Therefore discussions that treat women as a monolithic group do not fall within our mandate. Because conditions of inequality are continually changing, our mandate is continually evolving."

Each issue of this annual journal reflects the energies of this rapidly growing field by publishing essays, art exhibition and book reviews, bibliographies, and a forum on a current topic of interest to the study of early modern women. Essays may consider women and gender from any region of the globe and may develop a number of scholarly perspectives, including but not limited to art history, cultural studies, history, history of philosophy, history of science, literature, music, politics, religion, or theater. Approaches that challenge current assumptions and cross disciplinary boundaries are especially welcome."

The editors are committed to providing a forum for feminist analysis, debate, and exchange. The feminist movement has demonstrated that the study of women is more than a compensatory project. Instead, feminism has the potential fundamentally to reshape the way we view the world. We wish not just to interpret women's experiences but to change women's condition. For us, feminist thought represents a transformation of consciousness, social forms, and modes of action."

and encourage work on teaching as well as literary and cultural criticism and creative material. We hope an approach to pedagogy will bring in work from a wider area of disciplines. We are interested in a variety of feminisms and aim to be inclusive of ethnic and cultural diversity in an internationalist perspective. We are also committed to publishing feminist experimental prose and poetic works, and to experimenting across media. Our impetus came from the collectively-perceived lack of attention to non-linear writing, sf, fantasy, magical realism and supernatural works in feminist journals and audiences; the lack of consistently evolving developed levels of feminism in sf criticism; and the inadequacy of magical realism publishing outlets in the U.S."

It is an international forum for research on and debates about feminist research on gender and language. Gender is defined broadly, as a key element of social relationships often loosely linked to perceived differences between the sexes as well as a primary arena for articulating power in complex interaction with other dimensions of power, like class, race, and sexuality. It welcomes research employing and investigating a range of different linguistic approaches (including, but not only including, conversation analysis, critical discourse analysis, ethnography of communication, interactional sociolinguistics, linguistic anthropology, variationist sociolinguistics, stylistics and pragmatics) which focus on a range of different linguistic phenomena."

These include Muslim and non-Muslim communities within the greater Middle East, and Muslim and Middle-Eastern communities elsewhere in the world. Articles dealing with men, masculinity, children and the family, or other issues of gender are also considered. The journal strives to include significant studies of theory and methodology as well as topical matter. Approximately one-third of the submissions focus on the pre-modern era, with the majority of articles focusing on the contemporary age. The journal features several full-length articles and current book reviews. The majority of Hawwa's articles are in English. However, articles submitted in French are also considered.

6. [email: editor@persimmontree.org].
11. "Persimmon Tree showcases an impressive variety of literature and art by women over 60, many still working well into their 80s and 90s. Many of the writers and artists are well-known: Marilyn French, Ruth Stone, Grace Paley, E. M. Broner, Paula Gunn Allen, Jane Lazarre, Faith Ringgold, and Nicole Hollander. Others are lesser known, while some are newly developing their craft in their later years. All of them are at the height of their creative powers, and all of them express the shared, though diverse experiences of aging women, from late middle age to late old age. Persimmon Tree is intended to fill a niche that has been neglected by contemporary publishing, whether in print or online. There is a growing body of work by male writers and artists who are entering or well into old age. But the comparable body of work by aging women in much smaller and mostly limited to a few already well-known writers and artists. Women are creating, but they are not getting the exposure they deserve."

The aim of Reproductive Health Matters is "to promote laws, policies, research and services that meet women's reproductive health needs and support women's right to decide whether, when and how to have children.... [its] women-centered perspective...allows us to identify and understand women's reproductive health needs, and therefore evaluate and improve on existing policy and practice to women's benefit.... To this end, the journal explores what is meant by women's needs and how these can best be met. It addresses fundamental values, concerns and dilemmas, acknowledging the multi-faceted nature of problems and solutions. Finally, it reflects on commonalities and differences in goals and points of view among those involved in the field – in order to foster increased communication and cooperation, new thinking and action, and new forms of consensus."

11. "Studies in Gender and Sexuality is a response to the excitement attendant to recent research and writing by scholars and clinicians. It provides a forum for examining gender and sexuality that is both multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. As clinicians and scholars who have written and practiced at the intersection of feminist theory and clinical psychoanalysis, the editors are especially interested in those areas of controversy that invite the divergent perspectives and insights of different disciplines. Early issues of SGS focus on transgender identities and intersexuality; contemporary readings of the category of perversion; puberty and adolescence revised and revisited; and the intersections among class, race, and gender in theory, culture, and the clinical situation. The primary goal of SGS is to promote dialogue on these and other timely topics among clinicians, researchers, and theorists. Consonant with this goal, the journal also publishes related work from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences, where questions involving gender and sexuality are currently in lively debate."

11. "Trivia: Voices of Feminism is a public forum for the creative and the critical thinking of that great diversity of women who insist on our primacy, and who in league with and in the name of all the other endangered species on the this planet, refuse to accept the life-destroying status quo. We publish feminist writing in the form of literary essays, experimental prose, poetry, translations, and reviews. We encourage women writers to take risks with language and forms so as to give their ideas the most original and vital expression possible. Our larger purpose is to foster a body of rigorous, creative and independent feminist thought."

11. "The purpose of the journal is to encourage and promote an understanding of how visual culture constructs gender in context with representations of race, age, sexuality, social units, and social class. The significance of visual culture for art education rests not so much in the object or image, but in the learning and teaching processes or practices used to expose culturally learned meanings and power relations that surround the creation, consumption, valuing, and dissemination of images. Similarly, the significance of gender for art education involves issues of equity and social justice in the learning, teaching, and practicing of art."
