

Faculty members labor in the cause of international understanding

No more important public services are performed by members of the Law School Faculty than those provided to the nation in time of War and in pursuit of peace.

In each of the great World Wars, 1970. (See Gargoyle, vol. 1, no. 2.) many Faculty members have served on active duty in the Armed Forces or have accepted civilian appointments in the war efforts. Alumni are well aware of Professor Carl Runge's service as Assistant Secretary of Defense from 1961 to 1963.

Professor George Bunn

Emeritus Professor William Gorham Rice, Jr. took leave from the Faculty over 30 years ago to establish the United States Department of Labor's office in connection with the International Labor Office in Geneva. He also served as Assistant General Counsel of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency at the close of World War II.

Professor Charles Bunn served during the second World War in the Division of Commercial Policy of the U.S. Department of State. Also, in the interests of peaceful promotion of international trade, Professor Richard Bilder served as a representative of the United States on a panel of four experts to arbitrate a dispute involving coffee quotas, under the International Coffee agreement of 1962, which included all 40 member states of the International Coffee Organization.

Professor Carl Runge

Professor George Bunn joined the Faculty in 1969 after having served as General Counsel of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. He had served as Alternate United States Ambassador to the Eighteen Nation Committee on Disarmament in Geneva, Switzerland.

Since joining the Faculty, he has served as a consultant to the Senate Committee which has been seeking an amendment to the Defense Procurement Authorization Act to provide restrictions on gas and germ warfare research and procurement. Interest in these restrictions and the resultant legislative proposals came as a result of adverse public reaction to the killing of 6000 sheep near Dugway Proving Ground, to the Army's plan to ship obsolete nerve gas bombs by rail from Colorado for disposal in the Atlantic Ocean, as well as to the revelations that nerve gas was stored by the Department of Defense in large quantities on Okinawa and in Germany.

Professor Bunn, during his year on the Faculty, has also been active in the movement to secure approval by the U.S. Senate of the Geneva Protocol of 1925 which bans poison gas and biological warfare. He was the lead-off witness before the Subcommittee on Security Policy and Scientific Developments of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. He served as advisor in the preparation of a draft report on Biological Warfare and the National Security, which was issued by a group of Republican Congressmen, who urged resubmission of the Pro-ocol to the Senate. Professor Bunn has also during this past year served as Consultant to the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency on legal problems arising from the plans for the Strategic Arms Limitation talks, which began in Helsinki in November, 1969, and will continue in Vienna in April.

Professor Bunn is also continuing to aid in planning for implementation of the Non-proliferation Treaty, which will occur early in 1970. The Treaty was approved by the Senate in the spring of 1969.

Conclusion

A single issue of the Gargoyle cannot possibly cover all the many public services of the Law School Faculty. The deep involvement of many Faculty members in the affairs of the University—such as the services of Professors Eckhardt, Raushenbush and Finman as chairmen of the Conduct Hearings Committee and the Conduct Appeals Committee, or Professor Hetherington's service on the University Committee and the Student Housing Committee, Frank Remington's long-time service on the Athletic Board—has not been included.

Nor have we included, because the list is endless, the countless hours of volunteer time contributed to the community by Faculty members, just because they are good citizens. Professor Carl Runge (former Assistant Secretary of Defense) for example, has served as President of the Madison Parks Commission and as a member of the ad hoc City-County Committee on Water Resources in 1969. This is, of course, in addition to his various military duties over many years. Also an example is Professor Richard Bilder's election last year to a two year term as Trustee of the Village of Shorewood Hills.

A future Gargoyle will deal with the Faculty as teachers. It will also include information about the changing and developing curriculum. Together, these two issues of the Gargoyle can be used to provide a well-rounded view of life at the Law School.
