Feminist Periodicals

A current listing of contents

Volume 21, Number 3 Fall 2001

Periodical literature is the cutting edge of women's scholarship, feminist theory, and much of women's culture. Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents is published by the Office of the University of Wisconsin System Women's Studies Librarian on a quarterly basis with the intent of increasing public awareness of feminist periodicals. It is our hope that Feminist Periodicals will serve several purposes: to keep the reader abreast of current topics in feminist literature; to increase readers' familiarity with a wide spectrum of feminist periodicals; and to provide the requisite bibliographic information should a reader wish to subscribe to a journal or to obtain a particular article at her library or through interlibrary loan. (Users will need to be aware of the limitations of the new copyright law with regard to photocopying of copyrighted materials.)

Table of contents pages from current issues of major feminist journals are reproduced in each issue of Feminist Periodicals, preceded by a comprehensive annotated listing of all journals we have selected. As publication schedules vary enormously, not every periodical will have table of contents pages reproduced in each issue of FP. The annotated listing provides the following information on each journal:

1. Year of first publication.
2. Frequency of publication.
3. U.S. subscription price(s).
4. Subscription address.
5. Current editor.
6. Editorial address (if different from subscription address).
7. International Standard Serials Number (ISSN).
8. OCLC, Inc. Control Number.
9. Locations where the journal is held in the UW System.
10. Publications in which the journal is indexed.
11. Fulltext products in which publication appears or vendor intermediaries who make the full text available.
12. Subject focus/statement of purpose of the journal.

Please note that in the actual text, only the numbers 1 to 12 are used to identify the different categories of information.

Our goal is to have represented in FP all English-language feminist periodicals with a substantial national or regional readership, with an emphasis on scholarly journals and small press offerings. We do not include publications which, though feminist in philosophy, do not focus solely on women's issues. Nor, with few exceptions, do we include newsstand magazines. We are also forced to omit periodicals which lack a complete table of contents. We encourage feminist serials to build a full table of contents into their regular format to facilitate the indexing feminist literature sorely needs.

Interested readers will find more complete information on feminist periodicals in DWM: A Directory of Women's Media published by the National Council for Research on Women (530 Broadway at Spring Street, New York, NY 10012); and in Women's Periodicals and Newspapers: A Union List of the Holdings of Madison Area Libraries, edited by James P. Danky, compiled by Maureen E. Hady, Barry Christopher, and Neill E. Strache (Boston: G.K. Hall, 1982).

Suggestions for improvements of Feminist Periodicals are gratefully received. We would particularly appreciate assistance from readers in the UW-System with our efforts to keep the holding information complete and up to date. Please let us know about new subscriptions, subscriptions we have overlooked, cancellations, or other pertinent information. Feminist Periodicals is also available on microfilm at the library of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

12. "The Berkeley Women's Law Journal is guided by an editorial policy that distinguishes us from other law reviews and feminist periodicals. Our mandate is to publish research, analysis, narrative, theory, and commentary that address the lives and struggles of underrepresented women. We believe that excellence in feminist legal scholarship requires critical examination of the intersection of gender with one or more other axes of subordination, including, but not limited to, race, class, sexual orientation, and disability. Therefore, discussions of women's issues that treat women as a monolithic group do not fall within our mandate. Because conditions in inequality are continually changing, our mandate is also continually changing."

12. "Feminist Studies was founded to encourage analytic responses to feminist issues and to open new areas of research, criticism and speculation. The editors are committed to providing a forum for feminist analysis, debate, and exchange. The feminist movement has demonstrated that the study of women is more than a compensatory project. Instead, feminism has the potential fundamentally to reshape the way we view the world. We wish not just to interpret women's experiences but to change women's condition. For us, feminist thought represents a transformation of consciousness, social forms, and modes of action."

12. "Gender & Society focuses on the social and structural study of gender as a basic principle of the social order and as a primary social category. Emphasizing theory and research from a micro- and macrostructural perspective, Gender & Society welcomes studies in sociology, social psychology, political science, history, economics, and anthropology that are framed by a social analysis and a feminist perspective. Gender & Society is committed to an evaluation policy that does not preclude any of the feminist perspectives."

12. "The aim of Gender, Place & Culture is to provide the focal point for recent work concerned with gender issues in geography and related disciplines. Key concerns in this area include the following: geographical variations in gender divisions and structures of patriarchy; the cultural construction and the cultural politics of gender; the intersections between gender, 'race', ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, class, age and other social divisions. The journal will provide a forum for debate in human geography and related disciplines on these themes. By drawing together these contributions, the journal will highlight the relevance of geographical research to feminism and women's studies."

Appropriately social sciences research is reflecting this increasing concern with gender, especially in the field of work and organization where this journal is focused. Gender, Work and Organization is the first journal to bring together a wide range of interdisciplinary and multi-disciplinary research in this field into a new international forum for debate and analysis. The journal is dedicated to advancing theory, research and applications concerning gender relations at work, the organization of gender, and the gendering of organizations. Contributions are invited from all disciplinary perspectives, including anthropology, history, labour economics, law, philosophy, politics, psychology and sociology."

[It] reviews current writing by women, mainly in Australia: fiction, poetry, history, health, sexuality, social and cultural issues, children's and adolescent fiction. AWBR aims to provide women throughout Australia, urban and rural, outside and within the universities, with current information on small-press publications and books which are often seen as of only academic or special interest. Reviews also offer specialist woman-centered and feminist perspectives on books that have attracted more generalist reviews in the mainstream. Feature articles and reviews collect a sense of readings around topics that are attracting discussion and/or influencing women's lives."

12. The aim of Reproductive Health Matters is "to promote laws, policies, research and services that meet women's reproductive health needs and support women's right to decide whether, when and how to have children.... [its] women-centered perspective... allows us to identify and understand women's reproductive health needs, and therefore evaluate and improve on existing policy and practice to women's benefit.... To this end, the journal explores what is meant by women's needs and how these can best be met. It addresses fundamental values, concerns and dilemmas, acknowledging the multi-faceted nature of problems and solutions. Finally, it reflects on commonalities and differences in goals and points of view among those involved in the field -- in order to foster increased communication and cooperation, new thinking and action, and new forms of consensus."

11. Ingenta, SwetsNetNavigator.
12. "Studies in Gender and Sexuality is a response to the excitement attendant to recent research and writing by scholars and clinicians. It will provide a forum for examining gender and sexuality that is both multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. As clinicians and scholars who have written and practiced at the intersection of feminist theory and clinical psychoanalysis, the Editors are especially interested in those areas of controversy that invite the divergent perspectives and insights of different disciplines. Early issues of SGS will focus on transgender identities and intersexuality; contemporary readings of the category of perversion; puberty and adolescence revised and revisited; and the intersections among class, race, and gender in theory, culture, and the clinical situation. The primary goal of SGS is to promote dialogue on these and other timely topics among clinicians, researchers, and theorists. Consonant with this goal, the journal will also publish related work from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences, where questions involving gender and sexuality are currently in lively debate."

"Women & Language is an interdisciplinary research periodical and newsletter, associated with the Organization for the Study of Communication Language and Gender, which seeks to provide a feminist forum for those interested in communication, language and gender. It raises questions on the construction of gender and the interconnections among sex, gender, race, class, and heterosexual hegemony with regard to symbolic communications and the impacts of masculinist communication paradigms. Women & Language welcomes completed research, essays, personal narratives, poetry, as well as work in progress and information sharing on conferences, publications, and so on. It includes contributions from all disciplines, and particularly looks for interdisciplinary work."

Front Cover

Becky Trotter, "First Painting," acrylic on canvas, 1992. Courtesy of the artist and the Visual AIDS Archive Project.
Director of Publications and Editor of the People with AIDS Coalition/NY Newslite, Becky Trotter is also a board member of the GNP+/NA, the Global Network of People Living with AIDS, North America. Formerly of Joplin, Missouri, Trotter currently lives in New York City, and has been positive since 1989. Her art serves as a vehicle for the way she feels about being positive when she can't find the words.

Founded in 1988 as a collaboration among artists and professionals, Visual AIDS strives to increase public awareness of AIDS through the visual arts. The organization's two most visible campaigns, Day Without Art and the Red Ribbon, have become international icons of AIDS awareness. The Visual AIDS Archive Project documents the work of the artists with HIV/AIDS to ensure that their artistic legacy will be preserved, thereby safeguarding their place within art history. The Archive Project also facilitates the creation and presentation of new work and provides practical services to artists with HIV/AIDS, assisting in their pursuit of professional careers.

- Adaptive, Growth-Oriented, and Positive Perceptions of Mother-Daughter Elder Caregiving Relationships:
A Path-Analytic Investigation of Predictors
Lisa A. Hollis-Sawyer, PhD

One hundred twenty-two pairs (n = 244) of filial caregivers (daughters) and care recipients (mothers) were interviewed separately, to investigate the factors underlying positive, growth-oriented caregiving relationships. The outcome variable examined was the type of caregiving pair (positive, negative, mixed, and neutral), as determined by "blind" raters. Based on existing research, factors examined as being significant predictors of this outcome variable were perceived roles (role changes, role relations) and individual-difference characteristics (personality dimensions, fluid intellectual ability). The results of the path model tested support the importance of individual-difference factors in understanding positive mother-daughter elder caregiving relationships.

KEYWORDS. Caregiving, positive, growth-oriented, filial, path-analysis, personality

- Racial Differences in Breast Cancer Screening Among Women from 65 to 74 Years of Age: Trends from 1987-1993
and Barriers to Screening
Elizabeth Ann Coleman, PhD, RNP
Patricia O'Sullivan, EdD

23

Breast cancer mortality is decreasing for elderly white women but increasing for elderly black women. National surveys were used to study racial differences in breast cancer screening and effects of Medicare funding for mammography and to examine explanatory factors. A total of 13,545 women, aged 65-74, from the Health Care Finance Administration's Master Beneficiary File participated. After Medicare funding for screening mammography, the percent reporting a mammogram increased for white women, but not for black women. Clinical breast examination and breast self-examination decreased. Physician's recommendation, geographic area, education level and health status were the variables significantly affecting mammography usage for both races. Physicians recommended mammography more often if women were white, married, educated beyond high school and had an annual income greater than $20,000. These results support the need to design and test strategies specifically for black women and interventions to emphasize physician recommendations for breast cancer screening.

KEYWORDS. Breast cancer screening, mammography, Medicare funding, racial differences, barriers to screening

- Attitudes Toward Spousal Caregiving and Their Correlates
Among Aging Women
Liat Kulik, PhD

41

The study examined the attitudes of elderly Israeli women (n = 259) toward three aspects of spousal caregiving: commitment to caregiving, perceived harmful effects, and delegating responsibility to others. In addition, the study examined the contribution of several variables toward explaining these attitudes: background variables, equality in marital relations, spousal resources, and affective variables. The findings indicate that on the whole, commitment to care for the spouse was most prevalent, while perceived harmful effects and delegating responsibility to others were emphasized less.

Of the independent variables examined, equality in dyadic relations explained all three aspects of caregiving. Moreover, women with high levels of emotional hardness were less likely to delegate responsibility for caregiving. In addition, a negative relationship was found between anticipated dependence on the husband and the wife's tendency to delegate responsibility for caregiving. Finally, the affective variables (satisfaction with life and marital complaints) contributed significantly toward explaining attitudes toward spousal caregiving.

KEYWORDS. Spousal caregiving, commitment to caregiving, equality in household tasks, satisfaction with life

Women with Osteoporosis: Strategies for Managing Aging and Chronic Illness

59

Seanne Wilkins, PhD, OT(C)

This study focused on how self-concept and the meanings of aging and chronic illness provide an understanding of the diversity of strategies older women with osteoporosis use to manage their aging and chronic illness on a day-to-day basis. Twenty-eight women participated in this qualitative study through in-depth interviews and a self-administered questionnaire. While there was a range of strategies used across three groups of women, there was a predominant strategy which emerged as useful for each group: acceptance was used by women with confident selves, denial by women with contradictory selves and resignation by women with disparaged selves. An awareness of these strategies may be useful in understanding how women with osteoporosis make decisions to seek care from health and social service providers.

KEYWORDS. Older women, self-concept, chronic illness, management strategies

Meaning and Centrality of Caring Activities Among Older Women

79

Joanne Altschuler, PhD, LCSW

This article explores the meaning and conditions of caring activities for older women. Taped, in-person interviews were conducted with 53 ethnically and economically diverse women, 55-84 years old. The interview guide contained open-ended questions regarding the process of taking on caring activities and the centrality of care to personal identity. Past activities were automatically assumed, in contrast to the present experience of choice. Caring activities provided meaning and continuity throughout the life course. Participants reported becoming more self-protective over the life course and offered seven explanations for their increased ability to be self-protective.

KEYWORDS. Older women, caring activities, self-protective limits

I Want to Know: Exploring How Older Women Acquire Health Knowledge After a Myocardial Infarction Patricia B. Crane, PhD, RN

The purpose of this descriptive naturalistic study was to: (a) explore how older women not participating in outpatient cardiac rehabilitation (CR) acquire health knowledge regarding secondary prevention measures after a myocardial infarction (MI), and (b) describe women's perceived barriers to acquiring this knowledge. Women (N = 15), ages 66-88, participated in semi-structured in-depth interviews. Data analysis resulted in four global categories: (a) previous learning, (b) self knowledge, (c) actively seeking knowledge from others, and (d) information provided by others. Barriers to acquiring health knowledge after MI without the support of outpatient CR were also identified.

KEYWORDS. Older women, knowledge, myocardial infarction, barriers, secondary prevention

Perceptions of Alternative Therapies Available for Women Facing Hysterectomy or Menopause

21

Donna L. Richter, EdD
Sara J. Corwin, MPH, PhD
Carol E. Rheaume, MSPH
Robert E. McKeown, PhD

Women's perceptions of alternative therapies available for managing symptoms related to menopause and to the need for hysterectomy were explored. Data are reported from 17 focus groups of peri- and menopausal aged women (n = 82) living in two southern U.S. coastal counties. Analysis showed that emergent themes did not vary by race or surgery experience. Herbal preparations, vitamin supplements, "healthy living" (diet & exercise), and mind/body practices (prayer & "mental healing") were mentioned as possible alternatives for managing symptoms. Participants more frequently identified "other" conventional medical approaches—prescription medication, laser surgery, dilation and curettage, and "watchful waiting"—as alternatives to hysterectomy. Alternative therapies are linked to women's desire to gain control over their own health care decisions and practices.

KEYWORDS. Menopause, hysterectomy, alternative therapies, women and aging, health and aging, reproductive health

A Prediction Model for Polypharmacy: Are Older, Educated Women More Susceptible to an Adverse Drug Event?

39

Blake Alan Perry, MS
Lori Waite Turner, PhD, RD

Introduction: This study attempts to account for variation in the number of prescription medications concurrently consumed in geriatric populations.

Methods: Data were selected from The National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, III, 1988-1994 (NHANES III), Adult Household Questionnaire, a complex, multistage, clustered sampling of civilian, non-institutionalized populations, which included a volunteer sample of 5,249 individuals aged 65 and older who participated in NHANES III survey, representing four broad geographic regions and twelve states.

Journal of Women & Aging

Volume 13
Number 4

Results: Age, income, and educational level accounted for nine percent of the variation in the number of prescription medications concurrently taken ( $p < 0.0001$ ); though non-significant, there were gender differences regarding polypharmacy; in addition, there were significant differences with respect to educational levels by region and age by region ( $p < 0.05$ ).

Conclusions: Educational level accounted for the most variation in polypharmacy. Women, on average, consumed more prescription medications than men. Older, more educated women may be most likely to engage in polypharmaceutical consumption, suggesting a greater likelihood of an adverse drug event.

KEYWORDS. Polypharmacy, geriatric, prediction, ADE, geographic, women

Women's Retirement, Work and Life Paths: Changes, Disruptions and Discontinuities

53

Beverley A. Simmons, MS
Myra J. Betschild, DR

In this qualitative study we examine women's perceptions and interpretations of the impact of retirement on their life experience, whether retirement was encountered from unexpected workplace redundancies, through their own decisions, or those of their partner. In the first instance we examine traditional definitions and meanings of retirement and their relevance to women's experience. Any theoretical explanation that work is central to defining core identity and social integration is challenged. Secondly, this study provides some alternative ways to examine changes in work, disruptions, and discontinuities in the context of women's life paths. Whereas specific identities and roles may be important, being able to contribute to social life, whether through paid or unpaid work or through self-interests, may be more appropriate determinants of societal integration, than identities that are formed and maintained by a production-oriented society.

KEYWORDS. Women and retirement, redundancies, retirement definitions, change, discontinuities, life path composition, social integration, self-interests

Support Groups for Older Victims of Domestic Violence

71

Rosalie S. Wolf, PhD

A 1997 nationwide (US and Canada) search to identify support groups for older victims of domestic violence located 16 sponsored by domestic violence programs and 14 sponsored by aging services. Interviews with group leaders indicated more similarities than differences between the two types of sponsorship in group purpose, leadership, numbers served, content of support group sessions, and success in accomplishing goals. Resistance of elders to participate in a group experience was cited by leaders as a major barrier. Recommendations for future groups include insuring accessibility of meeting site; using a leader and co-leader, at least one of whom is older or familiar with aging issues; allocating resources for recruitment; and seeking a steady source of funding. A policy of collaboration among the state's domestic violence coalition, state unit on aging, adult protective services, and victim assistance program may help in promoting support group development and utilization.

KEYWORDS. Elder abuse, aging services, domestic violence programs, referral sources, spouse abuse

We are happy to bring you an entire issue on a single topic. As luck would have it, these eight splendid essays arrived independently in the journal office. Most of them were submitted to Signs during the final months of the journal's time at the University of Washington. We have grouped them into this cluster entitled "Bodies." We hope you enjoy them separately and collectively as an indication of the continuing importance of feminist thinking about bodies. We thank the editorial group at the University of Washington for making this issue possible.

Mermaid Miracle. Flora Witbooi won the women's solo section of the NBC Music Makers' competition this year. Watch out for this rising star! See our interview with her on page 27.

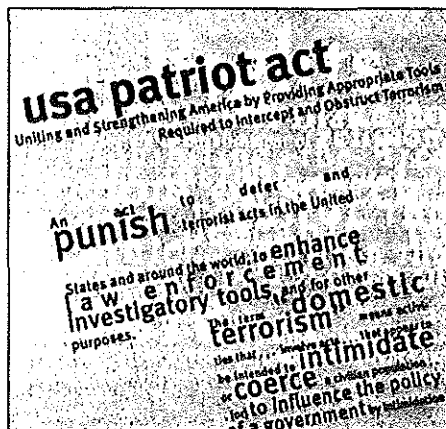

Agnes Samaria's (right) dream to see other countries initially motivated her to run. See our story on page 40 on this great 800 metres athlete.

The Namibian Girl Child Organisation, represented here by Christine Aochamus, is part of the landwide 50/50 campaign to get more women into political structures. Read the detailed report on page 6.

Coramae Richey Mann on Women, Crime and the Color of American Justice Joan Rosemary Mars

The contributions of African-American criminologists have yet to be given sufficient prominence and recognition in the shaping of the academic discourse on crime and justice in America. Persistent failures in the area of policy-making underscore the need for more diversity and inclusiveness in ongoing efforts to understand the problems that plague the administration of justice. The perspectives of African-American criminologists should be treated as a visible and valuable resource. Toward this end, the contributions of African-American criminologist Coramae Richey Mann are explored within the larger framework of her life and work in the struggle for social justice. The significance of Mann's unique "minority perspective" is discussed. Biographical data were gathered from her published works and verified by a telephone interview. A detailed analysis of her major publications is conducted under two themes: the etiology of female crime and the color of American justice.

KEYWORDS. Coramae Richey Mann, women, minorities and crime

Maternal Infanticide and Modern Motherhood Martha Smithey

65

Analyzing qualitative data from fourteen intensive interviews with mothers who fatally injured their infants, this article delineates the stages of the situated context of maternal infanticide. The data suggest that non-complying behaviors such as crying, difficulty in training, and prolonged illness by the infant challenged the mother's self-perception regarding mothering. Transactions are described that demonstrate the mother's failing attempts to comfort her infant and gain compliance. The article argues that the basis for the challenge to the mother's self-perception is the social institutionalization of motherhood norms that leaves the mother powerless to select alternative action or escape the frustrating encounter. It concludes that the infants in this study died as a result of the mother's inability to assuage her own pain produced by these failing attempts.

KEYWORDS. Filicide, infanticide, infant homicide, homicide, family violence, motherhood, self-perception

Lilith in Myth, Melodrama, and Criminology M. Joan McDermott Sarah J. Blackstone

85

This article illustrates how the social construction of both knowledge and popular culture has been influenced by mythic images of "fair and virginal" good women and "dark and sensual" evil women—what is commonly called the madonna/whore duality. The article examines the myth of Lilith, first wife of Adam, and the images of good and evil women that we can distill from creation myths. We then demonstrate how these images of good and evil women are illustrated in early twentieth century criminology and the 1920s melodrama Lilith.

KEYWORDS. Lilith, female crime, melodrama

A Guide for Treatment

Anita Jones Thomas

Spirituality and religious beliefs and practices have been used as a coping resource for African American women, along with Afrocentric values and beliefs. Many of the spiritual beliefs interact with stereotypes and images that have evolved from the legacy of slavery, specifically, Mammy, Sapphire, and Jezebel. The internalization of these images may lead to identity issues and psychological symptoms. Culturally sensitive treatment of African American women includes an understanding of spirituality and the interaction with stereotypes and identity issues. Guidelines for treatment are included, as well as case examples.

Does Depression Affect Clinical Practice?

A Survey of Women Psychotherapists

While recent autobiographical accounts of women psychotherapists with depressive illnesses have provided vivid and compelling portraits of therapists' experiences in therapy (e.g., Jamison, 1995; Manning, 1995), further research is needed to clarify the impact that depression and its treatment have upon both collegial relationships and clinical practice. A subset of the membership of the Association for Women in Psychology (AWP) was surveyed concerning therapists' experiences with depression and its treatment. Of 221 respondents, 76% reported some form of depressive illness. Eighty-five percent of respondents indicated that they participated in personal therapy. When evaluating their clinical work, respondents reported both positive and negative consequences resulting from their depression. While some respondents noted improvement in collegial relationships, many felt judged and avoided.

Challenges in Defining the Therapy Relationship with Women Who Are Commonly Diagnosed as Borderline: A Relational Reframing

Marisa Laviola

Attempting to define the therapy relationship with women who are commonly diagnosed as Borderline is an especially challenging task. The purpose of this article is to provide a feminist-based theoretical framework within which the therapy relationship can be defined. This includes a formulation of the origins of relationship difficulties, with an understanding of the centrality of relationships for women's development. This also includes a definition of the therapist's role as a perspective keeper who empathically communicates the reality of the patient's relational experience as it manifests within the therapy relationship. The therapist holds perspective on the impact of the client's childhood, the need for safety, the need to tolerate ambivalence, and the need to pace the process of healing.

Eating Disorder Recovery: Learning from the Client's Healing Journey

Michelle L. Matoff

Sabrina A. Matoff

Qualitative studies addressing the eating disorder recovery process from the client's point of view are notably absent in the literature. For this case study, we conducted a retrospective examination of the recovery process, as recounted by a 37-year-old female who was diagnosed with anorexia nervosa, binge eating/purging subtype at the age of 30. Two in-person interview sessions provided insight into coping skills, multidisciplinary intervention strategies, and long-term treatment challenges. In sum, the client's perspective can add new information to the understanding of eating disorder recovery from feminist and other theoretical frameworks.

This article explicates the merging of Goddess archetypes with method-consciousness raising and ritual-and skill to empower women in all-women groups. The suggestion of bringing the Goddess into all-women groups is explored. A brief presentation of the Goddess and Goddess archetypes is presented. This article illustrates spaces where and exemplifies how practitioners can bring Goddess archetypes into groups to reaffirm women and strengthen their resiliency.

In this article we report on the results of a survey of 249 members of the Association for Women in Psychology who were identified in the membership directory as clinicians. Given the popularity of self-help and clinical books for lay readers, it seemed reasonable to ask feminist psychotherapists whether any of these popular books are good enough to be recommended to clients. The majority of the respondents (93%) indicated that they regularly recommend books to their clients, and they sent us their favorite recommendations. Here we provide the list of their most frequently recommended books and discuss some other interesting results of the survey.

The novelist and poet Gérard d'Houville was one of the most decorated women writers of the early twentieth century, although she is primarily remembered today as the daughter of José-Maria de Heredia. This relationship shaped her critical reception and contributed to the current neglect of her work. Contemporary readers, however, will appreciate how, despite her status as a literary daughter, she was able to define her own poetic identity by taking a penname and seeking out connections with a female tradition. D'Houville's woman-centered poetry offers an alternative to the male-authored literary tradition represented by her father. She finds a voice of her own by speaking to and for her forgotten Creole grandmothers and women from classical mythology whose voices have been silenced or repressed.

| Mater Dolorosa: Motherhood Reclaimed in Three Novels by Marcelle TinayreFrance Grenaudier-Klijn ..... | 40 |

Under the combined influence of Rousseau's educational precepts, and the increasing power of the medical body, nineteenth-century France witnessed a new maternal ideology and discourse. Motherhood became a sacred function. Such sanctification led to a new definition of the mother as pious, devoted, silent, submissive and resigned. Mater Dolorosa reigned supreme. However, as my analysis of three novels by Marcelle Tinayre will show, not all novelists were ready to embrace such tenets with open arms. By examining the tensions created in each narrative by the introduction of maternal scenes, we will examine how Tinayre attempts to reformulate and in the process reclaim motherhood.

This essay focuses on the theater of Marie Lenéru (1874-1918), a forgotten woman playwright of the twentieth century. After an introduction on the many obstacles facing women who wished to write for the stage in the first half of the century, the study shows how Lenéru overcame those barriers. Lenéru wrote plays of ideas, a type of socially conscious theater, in which she explored themes such as divorce, pacifism and the role of the intellectual woman. Her plays were directed by André Antoine, performed at the Comédie-Française, and acclaimed by such authors and theater critics as Catulle Mendès, Rachilde and Léon Blum. Beach discusses three of Lenéru's plays: Les Affranchis, La Maison sur le Roc, and La Triomphatrice.

| Confesseur et pécheresse: conversion et subversion dans Léon Morin, prêtre de Béatrix BeckTess Do ..... | 79 |

Prix Goncourt 1952 avec son troisième roman, Léon Morin, prêtre, qui se souvient de Béatrix Beck, vedette littéraire d'un jour lointain? Qui s'intéresse à relire ce livre dont le titre risque de préclasser dans le genre de propagande religieuse? Pourtant, dans cette histoire de prêtre, « l'habit ne fait pas le moine ». Sous l'apparence conformiste d'une histoire de conversion et derrière le triomphe conventionnel de la foi, se tisse la trame d'un sous-texte qui n'est autre que subversion et parodie du texte de surface. Miné par le puissant désir de la femme, le sermon du prêtre se rompt et la voix du confesseur se perd dans le discours de la narratrice. Au seuil du nouveau millénaire, notre relecture du roman de Beck est justement une invitation à écouter cette narration de femme et à redécouvrir les auteures peu connues du siècle dernier.

| Writing to Survive: The Novels of Anna LangfusJudith Schaneman ..... | 92 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|

When Langfus' novels appeared, they were among the earliest literary texts to treat the Jewish experience of the war years. Along with writers such as Elie Wiesel, André Schwarz-Bart, Piotr Rawicz and Jorge Semprun, Langfus engaged in the attempt to transmit in fictionalized form her experiences of absence, loss and survival. Although tempted by memoir, Anna Langfus came to believe that this form of writing would not enable her to honor her responsibility to those who did not survive the Holocaust while at the same time freeing her from the lonely burden of memory.

Alexandra David-Néel, la première Européenne à pénétrer incognito au Tibet en 1924, connue pour cet exploit, est encore méconnue en tant qu'annonciatrice d'un orientalisme déjà « moderniste » fondé sur l'exploration « sur le terrain » et une expérience bouddhiste personnelle. Sa passion des voyages l'a amenée à explorer l'Asie pendant près de 25 ans, tant pour la documentation de ses récits de voyages et de ses livres sur les philosophies et religions orientales que pour son cheminement « intérieur ». Elle fut une pionnière de l'interdisciplinarité, pratiquant avant la lettre un orientalisme polyvalent. Elle a su, bien avant les savants érudits de son temps, traverser les frontières de sa discipline, rejoindre l'histoire des religions, la sociologie, l'ethnologie, pour construire un pont entre les études orientales et les sciences humaines.

| Re-Discovering the Travel Narratives of Ella MaillartSarah Steinert Borella ..... | 123 |

Swiss-French writer and adventurer Ella Maillart traveled all over Asia in the 1930s and 1940s before the onslaught of modern tourism. Maillart recounts through her prose and photos the stories that made up these journeys: her travel books offer observations and images of worlds little known to her readers. Maillart's five travel books make a significant contribution to the larger body of women's travel writing and to feminist studies as a whole. Yet outside of Switzerland, Ella Maillart remains virtually unknown to the scholarly world.

En envisageant la littérarité d'une conversation intitulée De la Sincérité et de la Dissimulation, nous montrerons comment Scudéry use du genre de la conversation, très prisé à son époque, non seulement pour formuler une réflexion complexe sur la notion de sincérité et de dissimulation dans le contexte social et politique de son temps, mais aussi dans la mesure où ces deux concepts problématisent ses orientations esthétiques, au moment où elle se tourne, vers la fin de sa carrière, vers la forme fragmentaire de la conversation et abandonne le roman.

Theatre as Metaphor in Mme de Charrière's Caliste

Ruth Thomas.....152

The theatrical metaphor that characterizes eighteenth-century French fiction is incorporated by Mme de Charrière into the narrative structure of Caliste. The paradox of the actor who becomes another while remaining himself or herself is at the very center of the novel. The love story of Caliste and William is presented metaphorically as theatre and permits Charrière to reflect on the relationship between art and artifice, illusion and reality, the self and the public perception of the self. The novel also examines the role of performance in the male-female relationship. By making Caliste the desiring subject rather than the desired object, and by placing the intended female reader within the text, Charrière breaks with tradition and calls into question the gender relationships that defined French society and French fiction.

Marceline Desbordes-Valmore and the Sorority of Poets

Aimée Boutin.....165

The inclusion of Marceline Desbordes-Valmore within a "fraternity of poets" has resulted in her exceptional status in the canon of nineteenth-century French poetry. This essay examines whether the "sorority of poets" received Desbordes-Valmore any differently. The historical evolution of a sorority of poets, however, underscores the problematic nature of ascertaining a tradition of feminine poetry from the point of view of women poets. If a feminine community took shape during the first decades of the nineteenth century, after 1840 more women poets eschewed identification with a feminine tradition originating with Desbordes-Valmore; conversely, that very notion of feminine poetic tradition was being shaped by male critics who used it ostensibly to write women poets out of canonical history.

Dishing the Dirt: Metamorphosis in Marie Darrieussecq's Truismes

Jeannette Gaudet.....181

The theme of metamorphosis and the construction of the gendered subject are examined in Marie Darrieussecq's provocative first novel. The literary trope allows the author to expose the violence of sexist language and the brutality of contemporary French culture. However, in this profoundly ironic text corporal changes are disturbingly consistent with the narrator's naïveté and inability to learn from her experiences. Elle est bête in more ways than one. This essay also explores how the naïve stance of the speaking voice constructs the reader as sharing the same truistic beliefs and may account for some of the strong reactions to the novel.

La Représentation de la femme dans le cinéma français des vingt dernières années: Sans Toit ni loi, Nelly et M. Arnaud et La Cérémonie.

Anna Gural-Migdal.....193

Cinéaste femme, Varda amorce avec Sans Toit ni loi (1985) une nouvelle tendance du cinéma français: mettre l'accent sur des personnages féminin ne servant plus de faire valoir aux hommes, mais qui existent par eux-mêmes. Elle sera suivie par Claude Sautet avec Nelly et M. Arnaud (1995) et Claude Chabrol avec La Cérémonie (1995). Prenant pour point de départ l'ouvrage de Gilles Lipovetsky, La Troisième Femme. Permanence et révolution du féminin, il s'agit de cerner dans ces films la nouvelle figure sociale-historique de la femme, tout en faisant valoir l'idée d'une invariance du féminin. On constate que la femme, partagée entre un désir d'émancipation et une persistance du féminin, est caractérisée par la différence, le refus, résultat de ce qu'elle ne veut pas être. A ce titre, le cinéma français des vingt dernières années emploie la figure de la femme comme l'expression d'une remise en question des concepts fixes et des oppositions binaires. La femme apparaît comme le reflet de son époque: une post-modernité caractérisée par l'indétermination et l'immanence.

GRADUATE ESSAY

'Celle dont la voix publique vous a nommé le père': Olympe de Gouges's Mémoire de Madame de Valmont (1788)

Giulia Pacini.....207

This essay argues that Gouges's autobiographical epistolary novel should be read as a fictional judicial memoir. This essay explores the reasons for which a disenfranchised woman would choose to write a work of fiction—and an epistolary novel in particular—rather than take her inheritance claims to court. It then discusses Gouges's representational strategies, as well as her discourse of women's rights and critique of religious fanaticism.

INTERVIEWS

Gisèle Pineau : Causerie à Penn State

Christiane Makward et Njeri Githire.....220

En mission des Affaires Culturelles françaises, Gisèle Pineau a fait une tournée de conférences aux Etats-Unis en avril 2001. La romancière, qui est aussi infirmière en psychiatrie, nous a fort aimablement accordé la permission de transcrire la causerie qu'elle a présentée le 13 avril 2001 à l'Université d'Etat de Pennsylvanie, University Park, pour publication dans Women in French Studies. La transcription a été assurée par Njeri Githire (doctorante en Littérature Comparée à Penn State) et la version finale éditée par Christiane Makward.

Une Sénégalaise avec une âme antillaise: Myriam Warner-Vieyra

Nicole Aas-Rouxparis.....234

Myriam Warner-Vieyra explique son art et sa vision en tant que "Sénégalaise à l'âme antillaise". Le regard qu'elle jette sur la société se module sur ses enracinements successifs en Guadeloupe, à Paris, puis au Sénégal où elle habite depuis 38 ans. Si l'auteur refuse toute correspondance directe entre son oeuvre et sa biographie, elle admet qu'étant elle-même plus sensible à la détresse qu'au bonheur des gens qui l'entourent, elle crée souvent des personnages féminins eux-mêmes en détresse. Cependant les nombreuses "femmes échouées" qui hantent l'espace de son oeuvre sont en fait toujours en quête d'ancrage et d'avenir. La trajectoire dessinée par chacune s'insère dans un schéma qui partant du non-récupérable peut atteindre le récupérable voire le victorieux. Si Julietane, de Julétane, est condamnée à rester étrangère partout, Hélène survit grâce à elle. Suzie, du Quimboiseur l'avait dit, est récupérée par ses propres racines — par la médiation du rêve. Le personnage féminin le plus victorieux, selon l'auteur, est sans aucun doute Mambo, héroïne de la nouvelle "Premier Prix" du recueil, Femmes échouées, car celle-ci ne doute jamais de son avenir.

Entretien avec Marie Etienne

John Stout.....244

Dans sa poésie Marie Etienne cherche souvent à donner la parole à des individus et à des groupes marginalisés. En reproduisant des images de violence contre les femmes et les autochtones, par exemple, elle nous pousse à prendre conscience d'un phénomène souvent passé sous silence. Tout en présentant des images intenses et violentes, Etienne préfère employer un langage impersonnel et neutre. En même temps, dans ses textes, on retrouve toujours une recherche dans l'innovation au niveau formel.
